

What happens once your RECYCLING and WASTE is collected...

Once your recycling has been collected it is taken to a reprocessing facility, where it is sorted into different types of plastic, paper and metal. The separated materials are then sent for further processing at recycling plants where they are used to manufacture new products.

Glass is taken to a reprocessing facility where it is separated using innovative laser technology. The glass is then made into a variety of new products including new glass products and aggregate for road building in the UK and abroad.

Garden waste is sent to an outdoor composting facility where the material is recycled into compost. To find out more about how to compost at home visit www.solihull.gov.uk/rubbish-and-recycling/Reduce-Reuse-Recycle

Non-recyclable waste is treated at the Energy from Waste Plant in Coventry, that Solihull Council part owns. Electricity is produced by the treatment facility, which is used to power the plant and any surplus is sold to the National Grid. The heat generated is used to heat buildings in Coventry City Centre.
